Dear parents,

This was a fabulous kick off for our small circle of sculpting enthusiasts! Today's theme was abstract and futuristic sculpture - small in dimensions, but grandiose in our imagination ...

As expected, our Kspacers embraced our simple, but effective material of choice - Styrofoam, bamboo skewers and toothpicks - with just a touch of glue.

Children were mesmerised with the choice of three-dimensional geometric shapes that were given to them as a starting point, and in no time they've started to bring to life amazing structures that almost defy gravity.

Sculpture is usually defined as a difficult, time consuming medium, but our little artists are not interested in theory but practice - they've shown us that with superb imagination and enthusiasm you can achieve wonderful results in a span of just one short school class.

Please enjoy the photos!
